er this evening, Albert. Memory is at work. I can recall-my God! what does it mean?" Albert Giovanni leaned over his sick friend until their eyes met. "It means, Leon, that death is even now grinning at your elbow! I knew that before you passed away reason would resume her throne and that you would suffer great mental torture as a punishment of sin and crime."

The sick man made no answer. He lay perfectly still, his eyes gradually from here. She escaped from it and assuming a look of agony as a tide of perished in the everglades." memory swept through his erstwhile clouded brain.

Outside the rain was softly falling; a gust of wind now and then shook the door and windows of the cabin. It was a rude structure made of rough pine boards running up and down, with a mud and stick chimney at one end. The one room was nearly devoid of furniture. Nowhere in all the wild swamp region of Florida hut Listen!" could there be found a more comfortless habitation.

The occupants were in keeping with their surroundings. The sick man lay on a pallet, at one side of which was a table containing vials of medicine, including a curiously shaped bottle partially filled with a white powder, and at the other a bed similar to the one he occupied. He had ing erect, a paddle in her hand, was a one day been a man of fine physique young girl, who, thinly and fantase and extremely handsome, but a wasting disease had reduced him to a mere skeleton, and his sunken streaming down her shoulders, and a cheeks, pallid features and general crown of water Illies on her brow, appearance indicated that the candle appeared like an inhabitant of this of life was rapidly burning out.

His companion was tall and sinewy. He looked like a college professor just being of to-day. from a German university with his dark glittering eyes and his hair falling in unkempt locks around his shoulders. Quiet and self-contained, skiff, she sprang on the beach and there was that about him which disclosed that his capacity for love or Arnosi, bounded to him, knelt by his hate was unbounded.

Sitting upright in the bed, Arnosi said feebly but resolutely;

"Tell me everything-everything!" "With pleasure. Fourteen months

A few days event of a medical investigation being ago a traveler offered him a good made. Marie, love-crazed though she price for his elk, but the farmer rewas, begged for your craven life when | fused to part with them. The same I made her understand my purpose. But I was inexorable. My plans were all carried to a successful termination. First you were induced to speculate, and in one of the financial storms that passed over Wall street last year the fortune you inherited from your father was swent away. leaving you a pauper. On the night of the day that brought this disaster you were drugged, removed secretly to a ship, and carried to Pensacola, thence to this spot at the northern extremity of the everglades of Florida. Around us the foot of man has seldom trod; in the vast jungle beyond no human being has ever fully penetrated. Everywhere is gloom, desolation, isolation. Hunters rarely visit these wastes. In the fourteen months I have been here I have seen been here in this no human being, heard no human dreary regionless voice other than your own. Twice I than fifteen fancied-"

He paused, wiped his forehead, and went on:

"My revenge is complete. Your death is only a question of bours, perhaps minutes. I have given you daily a dose of that white powder"pointing to the curiously shaped bottle-"and it has fulfilled the mission I created it to perform."

Arnosi still sat upright in his pallet staring at Giovanni, grasping his meaning little by little, while drops of sweat rolled down his face.

"And Marie?" he whispered. "She is dead. The Institution in which she was confined is not far

A strange smile crossed Leon's face. "You lie-murderer! Marie still Giovanni listened an instant, then, darting from the hut with a cry of terror, disappeared in the jungle.

Left alone, Arnosi still sat upright, his eyes fastened on the lake. Near and nearer came the voice. Another instant and a light skiff came in sight, seemingly dancing on the bosom of the water. Arnosi had strength enough left to strike on the windows with his hand. She observed the signal. Mooring the ran up to the cabin. She recognized side, and flung her wasted arms about his neck without uttering a word.

"Forgive me. Marie?" he whispered Perhaps at that moment reason was restored to the darkened mind. But if so, the excess of joy was too much

Crocodile Tears

The expression used in the headline has long been in general use to describe hypocritical sorrow, or pretense of sorrow where no grief is feltsources; one, believed in by the old naturalists, was that the crocodile would mourn and shed tears as if in derville says: "In a certaine countree. weep full sore and sheddeth tender tears."

A South Pacific Clock.

A curious timekeeper is employed by some of the islanders of the South Pacific. The kernels of the put of the candle-tree are used. They are washed and strong on the rib of a palm leaf. This is placed in a vertical position and the upper kernel is lighted. As all the kernels are of the same size and substance, each of them burns a certain number of minutes, and then sets fire to the kernel below. The natives tie bits of bark cloth along the string at irregular intervals so as to mark divisions of time.

One Woman's Artifice. A woman cured her husband of staying out late at night by going to the door when he came home and whispering through the keyhole: "Is name is John, and now he manages to stay at home every night and sleeps with one eye open and a revolver un-
